

Sensory Play

- The child developed fine motor skills by manipulating the sand and moving the toy cars through it.
- Sensory exploration was encouraged as the child felt the texture of the sand and experienced the movement of the toy cars.
- The child engaged in imaginative play as they created scenarios and stories using the toy cars in the sand.

For continued development, consider introducing different textures of materials for sensory play. This could include activities with water, playdough, or various textured items like fabric scraps, cotton balls, or pasta. Encourage the child to explore and describe the sensations they experience.
