

Science

- Toddlers can learn about the concept of cause and effect as they unwrap the toys wrapped in newspaper. They will understand that by removing the newspaper, they can access the toy inside.
- They can also learn about the concept of materials and their properties. By feeling the texture of the newspaper, they can compare it to other materials and understand that it is different.
- Toddlers can explore the concept of size and shape as they unwrap toys of various sizes and shapes. They can observe how the newspaper wraps around the toys differently depending on their characteristics.
- They can also learn about the concept of recycling and reusing materials as they engage with the newspaper wrapping. They can discover that newspaper can have a new purpose after being used to wrap toys.

To further develop their learning from this activity, toddlers can engage in sensory play using different types of wrapping materials. For example, they can explore the texture and properties of fabric or aluminum foil. They can also experiment with different methods of fastening the wrapping, such as using tape or ribbon. This will enhance their understanding of materials and their properties.

Book Recommendations

- The Gift of Nothing by Patrick McDonnell: This heartwarming story follows Mooch the cat as he tries to find the perfect gift for his best friend, Earl the dog. It teaches children the value of friendship and the idea that sometimes the best gifts are not material possessions.
- Not a Box by Antoinette Portis: This imaginative book explores the power of creativity and shows how a simple box can become anything a child's imagination desires. It encourages children to think outside the box and find joy in simple objects.
- Brown Bear, Brown Bear, What Do You See? by Bill Martin Jr. and Eric Carle: This classic book introduces young children to a variety of animals and colors. It engages them in repetitive and rhythmic text, enhancing their language development and early reading skills.
