

Physical Education

- The child has developed fine motor skills while manipulating the small dolls and furniture in the dollhouse.
- Through imaginative play, the child has practiced gross motor skills by crawling, standing, and walking the dolls around the dollhouse.
- The child has learned spatial awareness and coordination by arranging the furniture and dolls in different rooms of the dollhouse.
- Playing with the dollhouse has also provided opportunities for the child to practice balance and stability while interacting with the small objects.

Social Studies

- The child has learned about different roles and responsibilities by assigning the dolls specific roles, such as a parent, sibling, or friend.
- Through play scenarios, the child has explored concepts of family, community, and relationships.
- The dollhouse has facilitated the child's understanding of everyday activities, such as cooking, cleaning, and sleeping, within a home setting.
- By creating storylines and interactions between the dolls, the child has practiced empathy and social skills.

Encourage continued development through the dollhouse activity by introducing new props or accessories for the dolls, such as miniature household items or dress-up clothes. This can inspire the child to further explore different roles and scenarios, enhancing their imaginative play and creativity. Additionally, you can encourage the child to create their own stories and narratives using the dollhouse, fostering their storytelling skills and enhancing their language development.

Book Recommendations

- The Dollhouse Fairy by Jane Ray: A magical story about a dollhouse fairy who comes to life and explores the world beyond the dollhouse.
- A Family for Fudge by Juliette MacIver: Follow Fudge, a mischievous doll, as he finds a new family and embarks on exciting adventures.
- My Dollhouse, My Rules by Jennifer Bergen: A delightful book that celebrates the power of imagination and creativity through a girl's adventures with her dollhouse.

If you click on these links and make a purchase, we may receive a small commission.