

Activity: "My kid built a titanic replica"

History

- The child learned about the historical significance of the RMS Titanic and its tragic sinking.
- They gained knowledge about the time period and the societal impact of the Titanic's sinking.
- The child understood the class divisions on board the ship and how they affected the outcome.
- They learned about the rescue efforts and the aftermath of the disaster.

Science

- The child learned about the engineering and construction of the Titanic, including its size, materials, and design.
- They explored the principles of buoyancy and how ships float, as well as the concept of displacement.
- They gained an understanding of the impact of iceberg collisions and the science behind sinking and stability.
- The child learned about the technological advancements and safety measures in shipbuilding since the Titanic.

Building a Titanic replica provides an excellent opportunity for further development. The child can delve deeper into the historical context of the Titanic's era, exploring other famous ships, maritime disasters, or the role of shipbuilding in different time periods. They can also expand their knowledge of naval architecture and engineering by studying other iconic ships or exploring different shipbuilding techniques throughout history. Encourage them to research and present their findings to enhance their analytical and presentation skills.

Book Recommendations

- The Watch That Ends the Night: Voices from the Titanic by Allan Wolf: A novel-in-verse that tells the story of the Titanic's sinking through the perspectives of different passengers and crew members.
- I Survived the Sinking of the Titanic, 1912 by Lauren Tarshis: A fictionalized account of a young boy's experience on board the Titanic and his struggle to survive the disaster.
- Exploring the Titanic: How the Great Ship Ever Lost- Was Found by Robert D. Ballard: A non-fiction book that chronicles the discovery and exploration of the Titanic wreck, providing insight into the ship's history and its final resting place.

If you click on these links and make a purchase, we may receive a small commission.