

English Language Arts

- The child has learned how to read and understand game instructions and rules.
- They have practiced reading and interpreting action cards, property cards, and money cards.
- Through playing the game, the child has enhanced their communication and language skills by negotiating and making deals with other players.
- The activity has also helped improve the child's critical thinking and problem-solving abilities as they strategize their moves and plan their next actions.

Continued development can be encouraged by having the child create their own version of a card game, including designing the cards, writing the rules, and explaining the game to others. This will further enhance their reading, writing, and communication skills.
