

Art

- The student learned about costume design and set design by observing the elaborate and colorful costumes and the detailed and imaginative stage set in the musical.
- The student explored the element of expression in the performers' movements and facial expressions, understanding how body language and emotions can be conveyed through art.

English Language Arts

- The student gained exposure to storytelling and character development through the plot and the development of characters in the musical.
- The student learned new vocabulary and heard different styles of language, enhancing their verbal and linguistic skills.

History

- The student gained insight into historical aspects of the setting, costumes, and cultural references depicted in the musical, providing a glimpse of life and customs from a different time period.

Math

- The student may have observed patterns and symmetry in the choreography and stage design, developing a sense of spatial relationships and geometry.

Science

- The student could have learned about sound and light technology, such as the use of microphones, speakers, and stage lighting to enhance the performance experience.

Social Studies

- The student was exposed to cultural and social dynamics of a different time period as depicted in the musical, fostering an understanding of different societal norms and traditions.

To further develop the experience, the student can create their own mini musical by designing costumes and sets for their characters, writing a short script, and performing for family and friends. They can also develop their language skills by writing their own stories or poems inspired by the musical.

Book Recommendations

- "Mary Poppins" by Dr. P. L. Travers: A classic novel that inspired the musical, where Mary Poppins takes the Banks children on magical, imaginative adventures.
- "The Sound of Music" by Rodgers and Hammerstein: A delightful picture book adaptation of the famous musical, introducing children to the story and the magic of musical theater.
- "Magic Tree House #47: Abe Lincoln at Last!" by Mary Pope Osborne: An engaging historical fiction story that takes children on a time-traveling adventure to learn about American history and the life of Abraham Lincoln.

If you click on these links and make a purchase, we may receive a small commission.