

To make the sentence "My rings are not hard; they are made of soft material." sound less robotic and more conversational, you could try rephrasing it in a simpler and more relatable way. Here's a step-by-step breakdown:

1. Use a more casual word choice: Replace "not hard" with "soft."
2. Break the formal structure: Instead of using a semicolon, you can combine the ideas into a more fluid thought.
3. Add a personal touch: Make it sound more like a conversation by adding a phrase that reflects your feelings or experiences about the rings.

With these steps, the sentence could be rephrased as:

"My rings are soft, not hard at all, which makes them really comfortable to wear."

This version feels more natural and relatable.