

In understanding the different amounts of cocaine typically sold, it is essential to recognize that drugs are often sold in varying quantities which can affect both pricing and legality. Here's a breakdown of the common amounts in which cocaine is typically sold:

1. Single Dose or 'Hit'

This is often a small amount, sometimes referred to as a 'hit', which might weigh only a few tenths of a gram. Users may purchase this quantity for immediate personal use. It's important to note that the legality of possessing even this small amount varies by jurisdiction.

2. Gram

A gram (often referred to simply as a 'G') is a common unit of sale. It's enough for several uses for an individual, and prices for a gram of cocaine can vary widely but are typically in the range of $60 to $120 or more, depending on location and purity.

3. Eight Ball

This term refers to an eighth of an ounce, which is approximately 3.5 grams. An eight ball is a popular quantity for personal use and can often range from $180 to $300, again depending on market factors.

4. Quarter Ounce

A quarter ounce contains about 7 grams of cocaine and is commonly sold in larger transactions for personal use or distribution. Prices can range from $400 to $600.

5. Half Ounce

Weighing approximately 14 grams, a half ounce is often purchased by regular users or small-time dealers. Prices typically range from $800 to $1,200.

6. Ounce

An ounce (28 grams) is a significant amount usually purchased by serious users or small dealers. Prices for an ounce can vary from $1,500 to $2,500 or more, depending on quality and location.

Implications

It's important to note that the purchasing and selling of cocaine is illegal in most places, and engaging in such activities carries risks including legal penalties, health dangers, and addiction potential. Always consider the legal and personal risks associated with drug use.
