

Alveoli are small bubbles in your lungs that help you breathe; they take in oxygen from the air and send away carbon dioxide that your body doesn't need.