

What is a Sea Anemone?

A sea anemone is a colorful sea animal that looks like a flower, but it is actually a living creature! It usually lives stuck to rocks or coral in the ocean.

What Does a Sea Anemone Look Like?

Sea anemones have soft, tentacle arms that wave in the water. These tentacles look like petals of a flower, and they help the anemone catch food.

Where Do Sea Anemones Live?

They live underwater, often in shallow ocean places where the water is warm. They stick to rocks or coral reefs and stay in one spot.

What Do Sea Anemones Eat?

Sea anemones use their tentacles to catch small fish or tiny sea creatures. Their tentacles have little stingers that help catch and hold onto their food.

Why Are Sea Anemones Special?

Sea anemones help protect some little fish, like clownfish. The fish can hide safely among the tentacles without getting hurt. This is a very special friendship!

Fun Fact

Even though they look like flowers, sea anemones are animals that live in the sea!
