

Let's check the sentence: "Before riding a bicycle, make sure to pump the tyres."

This sentence is almost correct! Here are a few things to know:

- "Tyres" and "tires" both mean the wheels on a bicycle, but "tyres" is used more in British English, and "tires" in American English. You can use either depending on where you live.
- The sentence means to fill the bicycle wheels with air before you ride.
- So the sentence is grammatically correct and clear for a 6-year-old.

Great job! The sentence can be a bit easier for a young child by saying: "Before you ride your bike, make sure the tires have enough air."
