

Okay, little friend! Let's dive into the wonderful world of dragons and heroes, and talk about why flattery didn't work on our buddy Toothless in 'How to Train Your Dragon'!

First of all, Toothless is a very special dragon. He's not just any dragon, he's a Night Fury! Night Furies are rare and super clever! Now, when we talk about flattery, it's like saying nice things to someone to make them feel good, right? But do you know what? Dragons like Toothless can see through the sweet words when they aren't real. It's like when someone tells you that you're the best at something just to get something from you, and you can feel that it's not the truth!

Toothless is a smart guy, and he's not easily fooled. He can sense when someone is being genuine, just like you can tell when your friend is being honest or just trying to butter you up! When Hiccup tried to flatter Toothless to make him come closer, it didn't work because Toothless wasn't sure if he could trust him yet. Just like how you sometimes might have a gut feeling about someone, Toothless felt that he needed to be cautious.

Now, let's think about friendships for a second! Real friendships are built on trust and honesty. If Hiccup had been straightforward and just showed Toothless his kind heart and care instead of trying to use fancy words, Toothless would've felt that loving vibe and opened up much faster. It's much better to be honest rather than just trying to puff yourself up with sweet words. Trust is super important!

In the end, it's not about saying pretty things; it's about being a true friend. So remember, little one! When you want to make friends, be yourself and be kind. That's something even Toothless and Hiccup would agree on. Who needs flattery when you can build a friendship that can fly high like a dragon!