

Okay kiddo, imagine you are a superhero taking care of a little sidekick—this sidekick is like a child! Being their superhero means you need to provide them with everything they need to grow up happy and healthy. This is what we call 'full custody,' which means you're fully responsible for everything they need!

First off, think about the food you eat. Just like how you might want pizza or ice cream, kids need proper meals too. When you have full custody, you have to buy groceries and cook yummy meals for your sidekick. That costs money, which adds to your superhero budget!

Now let's talk about clothes! Every superhero needs a cool outfit, right? Kids need clothes to wear to school, play, and even for parties. Those cute t-shirts and comfy shoes can add up quickly. So, keeping your sidekick fashionable also means spending some bucks!

But wait, there's more! Your sidekick probably goes to school, and that costs money too. There are fees for school supplies, like pencils and papers, and sometimes for fun activities like field trips. Also, don't forget about the toys and games they want! Helping them learn and grow while having fun can get pretty pricey!

Lastly, a superhero like you might need to help pay for fun adventures! This could be trips to the zoo, movie nights, or even going to the doctor when your sidekick feels under the weather. Staying healthy and entertained is super important. All of these things together make up the costs of having full custody of a child!
