

What Are Mounted Police?

Mounted police are police officers who ride horses instead of driving cars or walking. This means they can see a lot more people from high up on their horse!

Why Do They Ride Horses?

Their horses are very strong and can go places where cars can't easily go, like in parks or big crowds of people. Riding a horse can help them get around and do their job better, especially during big events like parades.

What Do Mounted Police Do?

Mounted police help to keep us safe. They patrol (that means they walk around and check things out) areas to make sure everyone is safe and following the rules. If someone is having trouble or needs help, the mounted police can come to assist them, and because they're on horses, people can spot them easily!

How Do They Train?

To be a mounted police officer, they need to be good at riding horses. They practice riding a lot and learn how to take care of their horses, so both the police officer and the horse can work together very well!

Conclusion

So, mounted police are special officers that help keep us safe while riding their trusty horses. They can see things from high up and are always ready to help!
