

Okay, little buddy! You know how sometimes you play with toy trains and you have tracks for them to follow? Well, real trains have tracks too!

The train driver is like the captain of the train. They sit at the front and control where the train goes. Just like how you might steer a toy car, the train driver uses special buttons and levers to drive the train safely along the tracks.

The driver looks ahead to make sure the tracks are clear, kind of like looking both ways before crossing the street. They also follow a special map that tells them exactly which way to go, just like when you follow a treasure map to find a prize!

So, the driver makes sure the train stays on its route, staying safe and helping everyone get to where they need to go. Isn't that cool?
