

A beaver's home is called a lodge, and it's really special! Imagine a big, cozy house made out of sticks, mud, and grass. Beavers are super good builders!

Now, here's the cool part: the entrance to their lodge is underwater! That means when they want to go inside their house, they swim down, down, under the water, and pop right into their cozy home. This helps them stay safe from animals that might want to catch them.

So, when you think about beavers, remember that they make awesome homes and have a secret way to get inside!
