

Okay, little buddy! Do you know what a beaver is? A beaver is a furry animal that loves to swim and build homes called lodges. These lodges are like little houses in the water!

Now, here's the cool part: the door to the beaver's house is not on the top where you can see it. Instead, it's under the water! That way, only the beaver can swim in and out, and it keeps them safe from other animals.

They make their homes using mud and sticks they gather from trees. It's like building with big blocks! So, remember, a beaver swims down to go home because their special door is underwater. Isn't that neat?
