

What is a Hare?

A hare is a special kind of animal that looks a lot like a rabbit! They have long ears and strong back legs, which help them to hop really fast. Hares are usually bigger than rabbits, and they can be found in many places, like fields and forests.

What Do Hares Look Like?

Hares have big ears, just like we mentioned! Their fur is soft and can be brown or grey, which helps them to blend in with grass and bushes to stay safe from predators.

How Do Hares Live?

Unlike rabbits, hares like to stay alone or in small groups. They dig little holes in the ground called 'forms' where they can hide and rest during the day. Hares are very good at running fast. Some can run as fast as 45 miles per hour!

Fun Facts About Hares!

- Hares don't live in burrows like rabbits do; they rest in shallow nests in the grass.
- They eat grass, leaves, and sometimes flowers. Yum!
- Baby hares are called 'leverets' and they can hop around just a few hours after they are born!

So, hares are really amazing animals. They are fast, clever, and very interesting to learn about!
