

Okay, little buddy! Let's talk about the little hare, which is a kind of bunny. You know how when you hear a noise, you might look around to see what it is? Well, little hares have very special ears that help them stay safe!

The little hare always keeps its ears up high. When its ears are up, it can hear everything around it really well. If it hears a sound, like a rustle in the bushes, that means something might be near. It could be another animal or something else moving.

So, when it hears that rustle, the little hare gets very careful and quickly hops away to find a safe place! This helps it not get caught by animals that might want to chase it.

Isn't that smart? They are always listening and ready to move if they need to!
