

The sentence talks about lions and their fluffy hair, which is called a mane. Imagine a really big and soft fluffy pillow around a lion's face! This fluffy hair is important because it makes the lion look strong and brave, just like a king.

When we say a lion has a 'mane that puffy', it means the hair is really thick and round, which makes the lion look even more special. Just like a crown shows that someone is a king, the mane shows that the lion is the 'king of beasts', which means he is the most important animal in the jungle.

So, the lion's puffy mane helps it look important and strong, which is why people call it the king!
