

Okay! So, let's break it down! When we talk about a 'hare,' we're talking about a fast animal that looks kind of like a rabbit but is usually a bit bigger and has longer legs. Hares are known for being very quick and can run super fast, much faster than people!

Now, when we say a 'hare is ready to run away,' it means that the hare feels like something might scare it, or it's just being very cautious and prepared. The hare's muscles are ready, its ears are perked up, and it's watching carefully for any danger. If it sees something that makes it nervous, it can dash away in a heartbeat!

So, the phrase 'hare ready to run away' is a way to describe a little animal that is alert and prepared to escape if needed. It teaches us to be aware of our surroundings, just like the hare wants to be! Isn't that interesting?
