

Okay, little buddy! Imagine two kinds of guitars that make music. An acoustic guitar is like a box that makes sound all by itself. It's big and wooden, and when you strum the strings, you can hear it play songs very clearly!

Now, an electric guitar is a little different. It needs a special friend called an amplifier to make the music really loud. It's usually shiny and cool-looking, and you plug it in, just like charging a toy!

So, to make it simple: the acoustic guitar plays music by itself, and the electric guitar needs help to make its music louder. They both are fun and can play different kinds of songs!
