

Okay, little friend! Let's imagine a guitar, which is a special musical instrument that can make pretty sounds. A musician is a person who plays music. When they play the guitar, they use two hands!

With one hand, they are like a little bird picking at strings. They choose which string to play by strumming or plucking it. This hand helps make music that sounds nice.

With the other hand, they touch the long part of the guitar, called the neck. This part has little spaces, kind of like train tracks! By pressing on those spaces with their fingers, they can make different sounds when they pick the strings.

So, one hand picks the strings to make music, and the other hand presses down to change the sounds. Together, both hands work as a team to create beautiful music!
