

A determiner is a word that introduces a noun and specifies it in some way. Determiners can indicate quantity, possession, and definiteness, among other things. They help answer questions like 'which one?' or 'how many?'

In the provided sentence, let's identify the determiners:

The man's hair was long, so my uncle cut it using a pair of the clippers.

1. The: This is a definite article, indicating a specific man and specific clippers. It tells us that the speaker is referring to a particular noun that is already known to the listener.
2. My: This is a possessive determiner, which shows ownership—indicating that the uncle belongs to the speaker.
3. A: This is an indefinite article, used before singular nouns when mentioning something for the first time or when the exact item is not important.
4. the (again): Used before 'clippers,' this definite article specifies the clippers that the speaker is talking about.

In summary, determiners play a crucial role in providing clarity about nouns in a sentence by indicating definiteness, quantity, and possession.
