

Okay, little friend! Imagine you have a toy truck. Most big trucks have a roof, just like how we wear hats or carry umbrellas to stay dry when it rains or to stay cool in the sun. This roof helps protect the things inside the truck, like toys or boxes, from getting wet or too hot.

Now, think about a special kind of truck called a dumper truck. This truck is like a big shovel on wheels! It carries things like sand or gravel. It doesn't need a roof because the sand and gravel are already safe in the truck bed, and if it rains, it's okay because sand and gravel can get wet and still be okay.

So, to remember: most trucks have roofs to keep their stuff safe, but dumper trucks carry things that can handle the weather, so they don't need a roof!
