

Doctors are like special helpers who understand our bodies really well. When we feel unwell, it can be like having a toy that is broken. Just like we ask someone to help fix the toy, we visit a doctor to find out what's wrong with our bodies.

Imagine if you have a sore throat or a tummy ache; the doctor will ask questions and look closely at you, just like a detective. They know many things about how our bodies work, like how our heart beats or how we breathe. With their big book of knowledge, they can figure out what is making us feel unwell.

Once they find out what's wrong, they know the best way to help us feel better! Sometimes this means giving us medicine, suggesting we drink lots of water, or telling us to rest a bit. Doctors want to make sure we are happy and healthy again, just like when a toy is fixed and can play again!
