

Hey Troy! You know how sometimes when you're playing with your friends, you might gently push them or play-fight a little bit? Goats do something similar, but they use their heads instead of their hands!

1. Having Fun: Goats are playful animals. When they head butt, it's often just their way of having fun with each other, kind of like a game!
2. Showing Who's Boss: Sometimes, goats head butt to show who is in charge or who is the strongest. In their groups, they have to figure out who is the leader, and head butting can help with that.
3. Getting Attention: If a goat wants to play or wants other goats to notice them, they might head butt to say, 'Hey, look at me! Let's play!'

So, head butting is a way for goats to communicate and have fun with each other. Just like you play with your friends!
