

Building a house is a lot like drawing a picture! When someone wants to build a house, the first thing they do is make a draft. A draft is like a plan or a sketch. Imagine you want to draw your dream house. You would start by drawing it on paper first. This helps you see what it will look like and where everything will go.

The draft shows important things like:

- Where the rooms will be: Just like when you draw a picture with different parts, a house has rooms like a kitchen, living room, and bedroom.
- Where the doors and windows will go: You need to show where people can walk in and out and where the light can come in from the outside.
- How big the house will be: You decide if you want a big house, a small house, or something in between!

Once the draft is ready, builders can start working on the house, just like when you know how to draw your picture, you can start coloring it in! So remember, building a house starts with a draft, just like creating a drawing!
