

A lighthouse is a very tall building, almost like a giant tower. Imagine if you were sailing far away on the water, and everything around you looked the same. That can be a bit tricky! But a lighthouse helps out.

At the very top of the lighthouse, there is a bright light that shines far out to sea. When sailors see this light, they know they are getting close to the land. It's like a special sign saying, 'Hey, you're safe! There is land near you!' So, the light at the top is super important for sailors to find their way home.
