

Firefighters are special helpers who work to keep us safe from fires. When there is a fire in a building, it can be very dangerous, and people inside may need help getting out. Firefighters go into the building, wearing big protective gear, like helmets and suits, to keep them safe from the hot flames and smoke.

Their main job is to help people escape safely from the burning building. They make sure everyone is out and okay. They also want to stop the fire from getting bigger and spreading to other buildings. To do this, they use big hoses that spray water and special tools to help put out the fire.

Firefighters train a lot to know how to do this safely and quickly because every second counts when there's a fire. They are very brave because they go into scary places to save lives!
