

That's wonderful to hear! When you say, 'My child has improved with reading this term,' it means your child has gotten better at understanding and enjoying books. Improvement can happen in several ways:

- Fluency: This means they can read faster and more smoothly without stopping as much.
- Comprehension: Your child is starting to understand the stories and characters better, which means they can talk about what they read more easily.
- Vocabulary: They are learning new words, which helps them express themselves and understand more complex texts.
- Confidence: As they see their own progress, they might feel more motivated and excited about reading different books!

It's important to encourage this growth. You can celebrate by reading together, discussing new stories, or visiting the library to pick out new books. Keep up the great work!
