

Hi Vienna! So, you might have heard that the answer to the universe is 42. This idea comes from a popular science fiction book called The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy by Douglas Adams. In the story, a group of super-smart aliens builds a really big computer called 'Deep Thought' to find out the answer to the 'ultimate question of life, the universe, and everything.'

After thinking about it for a very long time, the computer finally says the answer is 42. But here's the funny part: nobody actually knows what the 'ultimate question' is! It's like saying, 'I have the answer to your riddle, but I forgot the riddle itself!'

Now, 42 is often used jokingly because it means that some questions in life are very mysterious and hard to answer. It reminds us that life is full of wonders, and sometimes, answers can be silly or unexpected. So, while 42 is a fun answer, we should keep exploring and asking questions about the universe!
