What is War?

Hi there! Today, we're going to talk about something called war. War is when two or more groups of people argue and fight with each other. Just like how sometimes friends can get into a little fight over a toy, but a war is much bigger and is not just about toys.

Imagine you have some friends who want to play a game, but not everyone agrees on the rules. If they can't find a way to share and solve the problem, they might start to argue a lot. That's a little like what happens in a war.

Sometimes wars happen because people want different things like land, resources, or power. It can be sad because many people get hurt. That's why adults try to talk about their problems and find peaceful ways to solve them, just like you should when making up with a friend.

It's important to learn about war so we can understand how to be kind and work things out without fighting. We can always choose to be nice to one another and find a way to share and play together!

So remember, wars can be scary, but we can always try to be peacemakers instead!
