

Imagine words are like magic little pieces that we use every day to communicate with each other. But have you ever wondered where these words come from?

Well, let's start from the very beginning. Long, long ago, when people wanted to talk to each other, they needed to come up with a way to express their thoughts and feelings. And that's when someone very clever and creative decided to create words! Just like how artists use paint to create beautiful pictures, this person used sounds to create words.

Now, these words weren't just random noises. They had specific meanings attached to them. For example, when you say 'dog,' you're talking about those cute, furry animals that bark and wag their tails.

As more people started using these words, they began to spread like wildfire. People started teaching them to their children, who then taught them to their friends, and so on.

So, in a way, you can say that everyone made words together! It was a team effort that has been going on for thousands of years, and that's why we have such a rich and diverse language today.
