

Yes! Hyenas are very interesting animals, and one of the things they are known for is the funny sounds they make. You might think their laughter sounds like giggling, and that's because hyenas have a very loud and unusual way of talking to each other.

There are different types of sounds that hyenas make:

- Laughing: When you hear a hyena laugh, it sounds a bit like a person laughing. This laugh can mean they are excited or feeling playful. It's a way for them to communicate with their friends!
- Whoops and Grunts: Besides laughing, hyenas also 'whoop' and make grunting noises. These sounds help them stay connected with each other, especially when they are hunting or playing.
- Growls: When they feel threatened or want to protect their space, hyenas may growl. This is more of a warning sound.

Hyenas are often misunderstood; they not only laugh but have a range of sounds to tell stories and express their feelings. So next time you hear a hyena's laugh, remember, they are just having fun!
