

One sunny morning, the Raven found a shiny, colorful stone. "Look, Owl! Isn't this beautiful?" he cawed happily. The Owl nodded and said, "Indeed, Raven. But remember, true beauty is found in kindness and sharing."

The Raven thought about this and decided to show the stone to his friends in the forest. When he shared it, everyone smiled and felt happy. The little stone became a treasure not because it was shiny, but because it brought friends together.

And from that day, the Raven learned that joy grows when we share with others.

The End.
