

Objective

By the end of this lesson, the student will be able to analyze and discuss the significance of the Ten Commandments in relation to ethical and moral principles.

Materials and Prep

- Bible or a printed copy of the Ten Commandments
- Pen or pencil
- Notebook or loose-leaf paper

Activities

1. Introduction: Begin by discussing the concept of ethical and moral principles with the student. Ask them if they have heard of the Ten Commandments and what they know about them.
2. Reading and Analysis: Provide the student with a copy of the Ten Commandments. Ask them to read through each commandment carefully and underline or highlight any words or phrases that stand out to them.
3. Discussion: Engage in a conversation with the student about their observations from the previous activity. Ask them to share their thoughts on why certain commandments may be more significant or relevant in today's society.
4. Personal Reflection: Instruct the student to choose one commandment that resonates with them the most and explain why. Encourage them to write a short paragraph reflecting on how they can apply that commandment in their own life.
5. Group Activity: If there are other homeschool students available, facilitate a group discussion where each student shares their chosen commandment and their reflections. Encourage respectful and open dialogue.

Seventh Grade Talking Points

- "The Ten Commandments are a set of moral and ethical principles found in the Bible."
- "They were given to Moses by God on Mount Sinai according to religious belief."
- "The commandments serve as guidelines for how people should behave and treat one another."
- "They cover various aspects of life, including our relationship with God and our interactions with others."
- "Some commandments focus on our responsibilities towards God, such as not worshiping idols or taking the Lord's name in vain."
- "Other commandments emphasize the importance of treating others with respect and kindness, like not stealing or bearing false witness."
- "Studying the Ten Commandments allows us to reflect on our own actions and consider how we can live a more ethical and moral life."
