

Objective

By the end of this lesson, the student will be able to understand the basics of communication, including how to express thoughts and feelings clearly, and will have fun practicing these skills through engaging activities.

Materials and Prep

- Paper
- Pencil or crayons
- Time for storytelling
- Space for role-playing activities

Before the lesson, think about some fun stories or scenarios that can be used for role-playing. Also, prepare to ask questions that will encourage the student to share their thoughts and feelings.

Activities

1. Storytelling Time:

The student will choose their favorite story and retell it in their own words. This will help them practice expressing ideas and using their imagination.

2. Feelings Drawing:

The student will draw a picture that represents a feeling (like happy, sad, or excited). After drawing, they will explain their picture to you, helping them to communicate their emotions.

3. Role-Playing:

Choose a fun scenario (like ordering food at a restaurant or going on a treasure hunt) and act it out together. This will help the student practice speaking and listening in a fun way.

4. Communication Charades:

Play a game of charades where the student has to act out different emotions or actions without speaking, while you guess what they are trying to communicate. This helps in understanding non-verbal communication.

Talking Points

- "What do you think communication means?"
- "Can you tell me about a time when you had to share something important with someone?"
- "Why do you think it's important to listen when someone is talking?"
- "How do you feel when someone understands you?"
- "What are some ways we can show our feelings without using words?"
- "Can you think of a fun way to tell a story?"
- "How does it feel when someone doesn't understand what you're trying to say?"
