

Original Oratory: is a category in which participants demonstrate their writing and speaking skills by creating and presenting their own speech on any topic (appropriate topics). Original oratory shows creativity and allows for a diverse range of topics to be explored, from personal experiences to larger issues or ideas (appropriately picked). It also helps develop critical thinking and persuasive communication skills. / Lesson Planner / LearningCorner.co

Objective

By the end of this lesson, J will create and present a short original speech on a topic of interest. This will help J express ideas clearly, practice speaking in front of others, and explore creativity through writing.

Materials and Prep

- Paper
- Crayons or markers
- A timer (optional)
- A comfortable space to present the speech

Before starting, think of a few fun topics J might like to talk about, such as favorite animals, a fun day at the park, or what makes J happy.

Activities

- Brainstorming Session:

Start by discussing different topics that J might be interested in. Encourage J to think about what they love or something fun that happened recently. Write down all ideas on paper.

- Creating the Speech:

Once J has chosen a topic, help them organize their thoughts. Ask questions like, "What do you want to tell people about this?" and "Why is it important to you?" Help J write simple sentences or bullet points about their topic.

- Practice Time:

Let J practice their speech out loud. Encourage them to use a loud and clear voice. You can pretend to be an audience and clap after each sentence to make it fun!

- Presentation:

Set up a special spot for J to present their speech. It can be in front of family members (or stuffed animals!). Let J share their speech and celebrate their effort with cheers and applause!

Talking Points

- "What is a speech? A speech is when we talk to share our thoughts with others!"
- "Why do we give speeches? We give speeches to tell people about things we care about!"
- "What makes a good speech? A good speech has clear ideas and is fun to listen to!"
- "How can we practice? We can practice by saying our speech out loud and using a big voice!"
- "What do we do after the speech? We celebrate! We can clap and cheer for our hard work!"
