

Objective

By the end of this lesson, the student will be able to identify and use subject and object pronouns correctly in sentences. The student will also develop a better understanding of how these pronouns function in different contexts, enhancing their overall language skills.

Materials and Prep

- Pencil and paper for notes and exercises
- Whiteboard or large paper for visual aids
- Markers or colored pencils
- Access to a dictionary (optional, for vocabulary assistance)
- Prepare a list of sentences that can be transformed using pronouns

Activities

- Pronoun Hunt: Create a scavenger hunt where the student searches for objects around the house and describes them using subject and object pronouns. For example, "I see a book. It is my favorite." This encourages active learning and engagement.
- Pronoun Relay: Set up a relay race where the student must run to a designated spot, pick a sentence card, and replace the nouns with the correct pronouns. For example, if the card says, "Sarah loves the dog," the student should say, "She loves it." This adds a physical element to learning!
- Story Creation: Together, create a short story using a mix of subject and object pronouns. The student can illustrate the story afterward. Encourage the use of different pronouns and discuss why they are used in each context.
- Pronoun Charades: Play a game of charades where the student acts out sentences using pronouns. For example, they might act out "He is eating an apple." This helps reinforce their understanding through movement and creativity.

Talking Points

- "Subject pronouns are used when we are the ones doing the action." (Examples: I, you, he, she, it, we, they)
- "Object pronouns are used when someone or something is receiving the action." (Examples: me, you, him, her, it, us, them)
- "Let's practice with the sentence: 'The cat sees the boy.' What would the subject pronoun be?" (Answer: 'It sees him.')
- "Remember, we use 'he' for boys and 'she' for girls. Can you give me an example of each?"
- "Useful phrase: 'I see you!' can change to 'You see me!' when we swap the pronouns."
- "Let's try to make a funny sentence using 'we' and 'them.' What do you think we could say?"
