

Objective

By the end of this lesson, you will be able to write a creative story inspired by a Guinness World Record.

Materials and Prep

- Paper
- Pencil or pen
- Access to the Guinness World Records website or a Guinness World Records book

Activities

1. Begin by exploring the Guinness World Records website or book to find a record that interests you. Take note of the record title, description, and any interesting facts.
2. Once you have chosen a record, brainstorm ideas for a creative story inspired by that record. Think about the characters, setting, and plot.
3. Write a rough draft of your story. Focus on incorporating elements from the record you chose, such as the characters attempting to break the record or the record itself playing a central role in the plot.
4. Revise and edit your rough draft to improve the clarity and flow of your story. Make sure to check for correct grammar and punctuation.
5. Finalize your story by writing a neat and legible copy. You can add illustrations or decorations if you like.

Fourth Grade Talking Points

- "Today, we are going to explore the Guinness World Records website or book."
- "We will choose a record that interests us and brainstorm ideas for a creative story inspired by that record."
- "After that, we will write a rough draft of our story, making sure to include elements from the record we chose."
- "Next, we will revise and edit our rough draft to make it better."
- "Finally, we will write a final copy of our story, making it neat and legible."
