Passage 1: The Brave Little Bird

One sunny morning, a little bird named Sam decided to explore the forest beyond his tree. While flying over a sparkling stream, he noticed a small fish struggling in the shallow water. The fish told Sam that a big storm was coming and the water level would rise, making it dangerous for him to stay there. Sam quickly flew back to his nest, gathered some dry leaves, and returned to the stream. He used the leaves to create a small barrier to guide the fish to safety. The fish thanked Sam and promised to help him someday.

When Sam returned to his nest, he found that a strong wind had knocked down some branches, blocking the entrance. He tried to move them but couldn't. Just then, the fish, whose name was Finley, jumped out of the stream and pushed the branches away with his powerful tail. Sam was thrilled and thanked Finley for his help. From that day on, Sam and Finley became the best of friends.
